Dear colleagues,

Many months ago I wrote to you about a hypertension project we were planning with the AMA's Office of quality Improvement. I apologize for the delay in hearing back from me. After much planning, the AMA decided not to fund the project. I continue to think an article that describes in some detail how effective practices use their teams and systems to achieve high levels of blood pressure control would be of interest. Do you agree, and, if so, would you and your team be willing to share how you care for this population? Thanks again.
Ed
